BRITISH AFFAIRS.

In committee of the whole on the state of the union -Mr. J. C. Smith in the chair -on the resolution offered by Mr. Gregg.

[CONTINUED.] Mr. Crowningnield. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, who has last spoken, regrets that this subject has been taken up so soon, but I regret it has not been taken up at an earlier period. Although, after I found certain information called for, 1 moved for other documents, calculated to shed further light on the subject, yet I then said, and I am still convinced that this information, could not influence my decisi. on on the subject under consideration. The documents called for are, however, now before us. And it appears that the balance of trade between the United States and Great Britain, is from eleven to twelve millions against us. This difference we are obliged to make up by remittances in cash or bills from other countries; when if we did not purchase of her more than we sell to her, we should not owe this annual balance, and the amount would surely be returned to the United States, very probably in cash, as a balance in our favor from other European nations. The trade, therefore, with Great Britain, so far as re. lates to the balance, is disadvantageous to us. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Clay) thinks this resolution will materially injure us, while it will inflict little injury on Great Britain. But there can be no doubt that the measure it contemplates will injure Great Britain vastly more than it will injure us. Great Britain has, with. out any cause whatever, condemned our vessels engaged in the carriage of colonial productions, the bona fide property of A. merican citizens. The gentleman has acknowledged, that these captures may a mount to six millions of dollars. I do not know the amount, but if the adjudications continue, I believe it will soon exceed that sum. But if the amount did not exceed tect our merchants. The goatlemen, in ars remarks, goes on the calculation that Great Britain will go to war with us, if we adopt this resolution. But I have no such idea. If, however, I held that opinion, I should not on that account withhold my approbation from it. Because I believe if a war should take place, the United States will have a great advantage over Great Britain. We should be able, in that event, to fit out a great number of privateers, and we should make two captures to their one. If a war should take place, which I do not hesitate to say, I should greatly depreciate, we should take twice as much of their property, as they would take of ours .--But we are not, by the adoption of this re. solution, about to enter into war with G. Britain. No such thing is in the contem plation of any gentleman. We are merely about to prohibit the importation of British goods, in consequence of her having seized our vessels, engaged in carrying on a lawful commerce, and in consequence of her seizure of A merican citizens protected by the American flag. With regard to the measure contemplated by the resolution, I hope that Great Britain will not permit it to go into operation; that she will, on the contrary, on mature reflection, give us back the property she has wrongfully taken from us, and liberate our seamen from the captivity in which she detains them.

With regard to the obvervation of the gentleman relative to our mability to sup. ply ourselves with the goods we get from her settlements in the East Indies, I think it proper to observe that they may be obtained from other colonies in that quarter, and as to spirits, there can be no doubt of our getting a sufficient quantity of spirits, notwithstanding the adoption of this reso lution. But suppose we could not obtain a sufficient quantity of rum, or manufactured articles for our ordinary supply, and the revenue should be thereby effected for n time. We ought not to be gov-erned by this consideration. But I believe the industry and enterprize of our merchante would soon obtain from other markets a sufficient supply of every article, woolen goods, perhaps excepted.

In November 1793, Great Britain adopted a similar principle with regard to the whole to nearly forty millions of dollars,- the colonial trade, except that the orders issued at that time went further than the present principle. In consequence of these orders four or five bundred of our vessels were seized. Every one knows the conduct of the American government at that time. A treaty was made in which Great Britain promised to pay for the aggressions com. mitted by her vesssels on neutral rights. But nearly ten years clapsed before our merchants received componsation for their losses. The principle slept till 1801. Great Britain did not find it convenient to call it again into existence before that time. It appears by a correspondence between Mr. King, then our minister at the court of G. Britain, and lord Hawkesbury, that she attempted to renew it at that time. Mr. King, however, remonstrated; and he finally received a note from lord Hawkesbury, who had referred the subject to the at. torney general of Great Britain, admitting that the seizure, under this principle, was not warrantable. The opinion is this: that the neutral has a right to carry on a commerce with the enemies colonies. That the continuity of the voyage is broken when the return cargo is landed in the neu. tral country, and has paid duties there, and that the goods can be safely transported to any belligerent country in Europe, in the same bottom on which they were originally imported or on any other neutral bottom. whatever. This appears to have settled the question, and numerous decisions in England both before and since that time have confirmed the principle as a correct one. But autwithstanding all this, to our astonishment, the same adjudications have been renewed, and the same principle considered as abandoned last war, is now revived. In the early part of the last sum, mer we find it once more brought into existence, and the following case was made use of, as a fit pretext, to warrant the new captures which were intended should be made under this extraordinary decision of the court of appeals.

In the latter part of the late war which was terminated by the treaty of Amees an American veffel was carried into the Island of New Providence, and adjudicated. An appeal was carried to Great Britain where the condemnation was affirmed on the ground that the was carying on a trade during war which was not allowed in time of peace. Under this decision the cruizers of G. Britain have seized a great nu mber of other vessels. I know this case particularly. The veffel I allude to was the Effex, capt. Orne. There was a direct importation of her cargo into Salem, in Maffachuletts, after remaining there flored three or four weeks, the duties having been paid, it was shipped for the Harman. On her postage to the Havanna the was seized, and adjudicated in New Providence. There was an appeal and ar ter remaining four years undecided, the judgment is at last confirmed in England, and the capture of the American reffels commences. Can we put up with such decilors? Can we agree to them If this principle be allowed, I delice to know whether the whole carrying trade of the U. States will not eventually be facrificed. By the carrying trade, I mean the direct trade to and from the colonies as well as to Europe. If we acquiesce in their capturing a part, Great Britain will extend her captures Bill further, and make a sweep of our whole trade. For my part I am not willing to make this facrifice; if it were no more than a million I would not agree it.

As to the impresiment of our feamen, that too is a subject of most ferious complaint. We have called for a document on this point which unfortunately is not yet on our tables. It is so ex. tensive and the information drawn from such va. rious fources that the fectetary of flare has not yet been able to present it. We have however onderstood, that the number of our impressed sea. men amounts to above three thousand. During the last war G Britain impressed upwards of two thousand of our seamen, of which the restored twelve hundred proved to be American, and 800 remained in ber poffession at the pea e. In the mort period of two years the has impressed 3 000 feamen. I believe that we are bound, by all peaceable means, to obtain the liberation of thefe men. Lately, one of our frigates was fitp. wrecked off Tripoli, and 300 feamen taken cap. tives. We immediately paffed a new appropria tion bill, and fent out leveral additional frigares, The affair has terminated honorably to our country, and our feamen are releafed. Will we not now do as much for 3,000 feamen, as we then did for 300, which are but a tenth part? After the course we are now taking, thousa Britain perfift in her captures and in her oppreffive creatment of our feamen, and refuse to give them up, I would not hefitate to meet her in war. But, as I observed before, I. do not believe Great. Britain will go to war. Our trade is too valua. ble to her, She knows too that in such an event the will lose ber Eaftern provinces. The flates of Vermont and Maffachufetts will afk no other affiftance than her own militia to take Cansua and Nova Scotia. Some of her West Islands will likewife fall. She knows also other things. Her subjects own fixteen millions of the old pub. lic debts of the U. States, eight millions of the Louisians flock; and three or four millions of Bank flock ; and have private debts to the amount of ten or twelve millions, amounting in

Will Great Britain, by going to war, rifque her ! provinces, and this targe amount of property? think the will to pur to much at hazard. I believe the will take up other fleps than are ufusi with regard to neutral trade. As I faid before, the rik of a contrary course will be too great. Her minifter is now trying a fyllem, the continuance in which will depend on us. He means to fee how much we can bear. By this Rep we shall put an end to it. If, before it goes into effect, we give him time to reflect, he will, rather than experience the injury that me. naces his country, pay for the property that has been condemned, and release our feamen. Under these circumstances, and viewing the resolution se a pacific measure, I hope it will be adopted

Austerlitz, 14th Frimaire, year 14.

The Emperor set out vesterday from Austerlitz, for his advanced posts pear Sarutchi, where he placed himself near his bivouse. The Emperor of Germany was not long in arriving there. The two monarchs had an interview which lasted two hours. The Emperor of Germany did not conceal both on his side and on that of the Emperor of Russia the contempt they felt for the conduct of England .-They are a set of shop-keepers he repeated, who set the Continent on fire in or. der to secure to themselves the trade of the world.

These two Princes agreed on an armistice and on the principal conditions of peace which is to be negociated and terminated within a few days. The emperor of Germany then informed the Emperor that the Emperor of Russia likewise designed to make a seperate peace; that he entirely abandoned the affairs of England, and no longer took any interest in them.

The Emperor of Germany frequently repeated " There is no doubt but that in her dispute with England, France is in the right." He solicited also a truce for the remainder of the Russian army. The Emperor observed to him that the Russian army was surrounded, and that not a man could escape : but added he, " I desire to do samething agreeable to the Emror Alexander, I will suffer the Russian army so pass. I will stop the march of my columns, but your majesty must promise me that the Russian army will return ioto Russia and evacuate Germany and Austria and Prussian Poland." Such is the intention of the Emperor Alexander. replied the Emperor of Germany, I can assure you, besides you may convince vourself of it in the course of the night, by your own officers.

It is asserted that the Emperor said to the Emperor of Germany, when he asked him to come near the fire of his bivouac. " I receive you on the only palace I have inhabited for these two months past." The Emperor of Germany replied laughing (" vous tirez si bon-parti de cette habitation, qu'elle doit vous plaire.") It has been so much to your advantage, that I do not wonder at its pleasing you." This is as near us could be understood the words which dropt from him. The sum erous suite of the two princes were not so far distant but that they heard something that was said.

The Emperor accompanied the Emperor of Germany to his carriage, and caused prince Lichstenstein and general prince Schwarzenberg, to be presented to him; after which he returned to sleep at Auster-

Every information is collecting for the purpose of writing a fine description of the battle of Austerlitz. A great number of engineers are drawing up the plan of the field of battle. The loss of the Russians has been immense. Generals Kutusow and Buxhowden were wounded. Ten or 12 generals were killed. Several aides-decamp to the emperor of Russia and a great number of officers of distinction lost their lives. It is not 120 pieces of cannon, but 150, which have been taken. The enemy's colamns which threw themselves into the lake were favored by the ice, but the cannonade broke it and two whole columns were drowned. On the evening of the day and for several hours during the night, the emperor rode over the field of battle, and caused the wounded to be carried away, a horrible spectacle, if ever there was one. The emperor mounted on a veey fleet horse, galloped along as swife as lightning; nothing was more affecting than to see these brave fellows recognize him on the field, some forgot their sufferings and said, " At least the victory is certain & others, " I have suffered for these again hours, and since the beginning of the bai. tle I am abandoned, but I have done my duty," others, "You ought to be satisfied with your soldiers to-day." With each wounded soldier the emperor left a guard who caused him to be transported into the moveable hospitals. It is iterrible to say, that 48 hours after the battle there were still a great number of Russiaus whose wounds we were not able to get dressed All the French were so before night. lostead of 40 pair of colors, we have already 45 brought in, and our soldiers still fad the remainder of several others. Nothing can equal the gaiety of the soldiers at their bivouacs. They scarcely perceive an officer of the emperor, but they cry out to him Has the emperor been satisfied with us!"

In passing before the 28th of the line which has a great number of conscripts of Calvados and of the Lower Seine, the emperor said to it, " I hope that the Normans will distinguish themselves to day." They kept their word. The Normans distinguished themselves. The emperor who knows the composition of each regiment, said a few words, them few words arrived & spoke to the hearts of those to whom they were addressed, &became their rallying sig. nal in the midst of the fire. He said to the 75th ' Recollect it is many years since liure named you the Terrible." It would be necessary to name all the regiments of the army. There was not one which did not show prodigies of bravery and intrepidity, Here inceed it might be said, that death took the alarm and fled before our ranks to burst over the enemies ranks. Not a corps made-a retrogade movement. The emperor said, I have fought 30 battles such as this, but I never saw one in which the victory was more decisive, and the chances so little balanced. The foot guards of the emperor were not engaged. They went with rage. When they asked to be em. ployed, the emperor said to them, " Rejoice that you have not yet been in the action, you are to fall on as a reserve. So much the better if you are not wanted to-

Three colonels of the Imperial Russian guard were taken with the general who commanded them. The hassars of this guard made a charge on the division Caffa. relli. This charge cost them 300 men who remained on the field of battle, The French cavalry shewed itself superior and acquitted itself admirably well.

At the end of the action the emperor sent colonel Dallemagne with two rous of his guard as partisans to ride over the field of battle and bring in the run-

He took several stands of colours and 1,500 prisoners. The guards greatly regret the colonel of the horse rangers, Mor. land, who was killed with a grape shot, as he was charging the artillery of the Russian Imperial Guards. This artillery was taken; but this brave colonel found his death. We had not one general killed .-Colonel Mazas, of the 14th of line, a brave man, was killed. Many Chiefs of batta. lion were wounded. The Voltigeurs vied with the grenadiers The 55th, 43th, 14th, 36th, 40th, 17th. But we dare mention no corps; it would be an injustice to the others, they all performed wonders .--There was not a single general, an officer, a soldier, but was determined to conquer or to die.

We must not conceal a trait that does honour to the enemy. The commander of the artillery of the Russian Imperial Guards had just lost his cannon. He met the emperor, "Sire, said he, get me shot; I have just lost my cannon." "Young man," answered the Emperor, "I appreciate your tears, but one may be beat by my army, and still have a title to glo-

Our advanced posts are arrived at Olmutz. The empress and the whole court have fled from thence in the greatest haste. Colonel Corbineau, equerry to the Emperor, commander of the 5th regiment of rate gers, had 4 horses killed under him, spon the 5th he was wounded himself, after seizing a stand of colours. Prince Mura bestows great praise on the fine manouvres of general Kellerman, on the fine charges of generals Nanzonty and d'Hautpoul and in fine of all the generals, for one knows not whom to name because they should all be named. The soldiers of the train have merited the praises of the army. The artillery made a dreadful havock among the enemy. When an account was given of it to the emperor, he said: Its successes give me pleasure; for I have not forgot that it was in this corps that I began my military career.

For a number of years, a most valuable MILL-SEAT, SITUATED on the waters of the four mile rm is perior advantages in all respects as will appear from the annexed certificate. "I do hereby certify that I furveyed and fished a the feite for a Mill on the waters of four mile run the effate of George Wastington Park Cuffi, El the efface of George waltington Park Cults, had This feite has many great advantages, by display race only fixty poles in length, and riving a dami two and an half feet in height, twenty eight feethin may be had, which is quite sufficient—if it was not a may be had by extending the great deal more may be had by extending the rac no poles further. Where the dam ought to be, is a lolid rock; where the water falls twelve feet in the cir-

tance of a few yards. The ground through which the race will pass, is very fate and convenient, and where the Mill house ought to be erected, the ground where the Militabate ought to be erected, the ground is well adapted for convenience and to fave expense. On the premifes at a very fhort distance, there where and timber of good quality, inflicient for all building that can be wanted. This scite is about fix miles for that can be wanted. Aiexandria, a less distance from George town and the City, and one mile from the Great Road leading from Alexandria to Leefburgh."

Given under my hand, February 15, 1866,

The above farvey was undertaken by colore Ghri at my particular request, he being a gentleman whose great fkill and experience in Mathematics, rendered him peculiarly fitted for the talk. Any futther information may also be obtained from him.

To an eligible man, or fet of men, willing to LEASE

this effabliffiment, the length of time will be cohapted will give all the Stone and Timber necessary for il erection of the works fice of charge. I purpose building a Saw Mill, at soon as the race hall have been complete at which the fawing for the other Mill hall bedone with out expence. The stream is a very constant one as the neighborhood can testify, and there is no Mill above the present seat. Mr. Jacob Bontz, living upon the Leuburg road about five miles from Alexandria, will show the premises, and give any surther information that may be required.
